by: Blayne Johson

Me as a Peer Responder

Introduction

After carefully reviewing my response style given to others, I have determined that I am both an encouraging and personal peer responder, and that I also attempt to connect with my readers by clarifying examples and ideas to them.

Main Reason 1

I give a sense of personal connection with my readers through my use of Istatements.

Main Reason 2

I tend to give a lot of praise to those that I am peer reviewing to let them know what they are doing right.

Main Reason 3

I often tend to clarify my ideas and viewpoints in making responses to my

Facts or Examples

- 1 " I felt your personal conflict when describing the whole ordeal."
- 2 "I completely agree with you Tristan on the issue of violence."
- "I do believe that this is a problem on campus that needs to be adressed though"

Facts or Examples

- "You appear to have a very well developed writing style."
- "I like how you explain how ordinary the situation was before everything happened."
- "I really enjoyed viewing your project. I think you have an excellent idea in place. "

Facts or Examples

- "Research is very important to writing a strong paper and gathering your resources."
- "If there's one thing that I've learned ... it is.. there's multiple ways to get involved."
- "That isn't fair to the individuals and there is no correct way of judging someone in that context."

Conclusion

Upon reviewing the frequency of certain types of responses, I now understand that I have developed a unique style of both praise, personal connection, and clarification when responding to my peers. By applying all three of these techniques to my responses, I am able to succesfully give valid and helpful insight through responding to my peers.

